

ABSTRACT

The invention relates to a spray damping unit for printing machines, with a spray housing attached to a machine frame which extends parallel to and along the roller to be dampened, and a spray bar carrying spray valves, which is adjustably attached on the spray housing in a direction radial to the roller. The spray bar can be additionally adjusted in its longitudinal direction parallel to the roller.

(Fig. 1)